VAMPIRE QUEEN COUNT DRAG-ULA

WORLD'S BIGGEST BUNNY

IT'S official — Dancer, a 26-pound, 3-foot-long rabbit has hopped into the record book as the world's biggest bunny.

The Guinness Book of Records recently honored 4-year-old Dancer, who beefed up her freakish frame by wolfing down more than 1½ pounds of bread, cabbage and rabbit food daily.

Daunting Dancer is a handful for schoolgirl owner Sarah Dooley, 11, of Sinningbourne, England who regularly cuddles up with her beefy bunny.

Dancer's breed, British Giant, is as big as a small dog — normally weighing anywhere from 12-20 pounds and with life spans of 5 to 8 years.

But Dancer has outgrown all the rest and is more than five times the weight of an average rabbit. Her nearest competitor is a younger British Giant named Daddy's Girl that weighs about a pound less and is owned by a couple in Bexhill.

"We take Dancer to shows across the country," says Sarah's mom Sue. "Because of her size she has become quite a celebrity. She's got such a lovely personality. We knew she was a big girl but didn't realize how big until we were approached by The Guinness Book of Records to have her entered as the biggest living rabbit in the world.

"With that title under her belt, it would be impossible to put a price on her. We've had lots of offers from people wanting to buy her, but we'd never part with her."

LITTLE SHOP OF

Son stores dead mom

By MICHAEL CHIRON/Weekly World News

A LOVING SON couldn't bear to be parted from his dead mom and dad — so he embalmed their bodies and kept them in the basement of a small fish shop!

Flabbergasted cops in Edinburgh, Scotland, who made the grisly find, believe the pair had been dead for at least three years and say the macabre scenario is reminiscent of the harrowing Alfred Hitchcock classic Psycho.

The couple, whose names have been withheld by authorities, were found lying side by side in coffins and posed as if enjoying a deep, peaceful snooze.

"The bodies had been expertly embalmed and appeared to have been cared for by their son," one shaken police source told a reporter.

"It was a gruesome discovery and sent a chill down our spines."

Detectives believe the parents, who appear to have been in their 70s when they passed away, died of natural causes and no foul play was involved.

HORRORS!

...and dad in basement for three years!

The son, who was also not identified by police, was hauled in for questioning, but insiders say most likely no charges will be filed against him.

Neighbors were stunned to learn that the slightly built, mild-mannered former undertaker is a real-life version of Norman Bates, the mother-obsessed taxidermy buff and serial killer in Psycho.

"He was a really strange little man but we never suspected anything like this," one resident told a British newspaper.

"I can't believe those bodies lay there all the time. It's like something out of a horror movie."

What's now being dubbed "the little shop of horrors" is a former fish market and sits in the middle of Gilmore Place, one of the busiest streets in Edinburgh.

The son, who's in his 40s, moved into the shop — somehow managing to smuggle in his mummified mom and preserved pop unnoticed.

Neighbors naturally assumed he was the new owner of the shop and expected the place to open for business any day. They thought it was a bit odd when the shop never reopened. And the newcomer's creepy behavior also raised a few eyebrows.

"Sometimes the man would be seen standing outside staring up the road into space but he never spoke to anyone," one neighbor was quoted as saying in The Daily Record.

Police were investigating an unrelated matter when they entered the shop and stumbled onto the shocking secret!

"He seemed a bit weird — we had no idea what was in the shop."

Police were conducting a routine investigation into an unrelated matter when they entered the shop on April 26 and stumbled onto the shocking secret.

They say the front room of the store was empty except for a chair and desk. But when they went downstairs into the basement, they were treated to a hair-raising introduction to the out-of-kilter Scotsman's folks.

"It's not what we expected to find," the police source shuddered.

Forensic teams spent six hours scouring the tiny shop, but failed to turn up any more bodies or other evidence that a crime had been committed.

Investigators have concluded that the lonely bachelor was simply "a wee bit too attached" to his parents and kept them around for company.

Ironically, the shop is located in one of Edinburgh's most upscale neighborhoods, where snooty dwellers could never imagine a purse-snatching taking place — let alone dead bodies being hidden next door.

"It is a busy street so you'd never think someone could keep a secret like this here, but I suppose in a way it's the perfect spot," a neighbor said.

"No one would suspect something so gruesome here."

COUNT DRAG-ULA!

Cross-dressing vampire is like a blood-drinking Ru Paul

A BLOOD-SLURPING descendant of the real Dracula has become a laughingstock in his native Transylvania — because he's a lisping, hip-swiveling drag queen!

By MIKE FOSTER/Weekly World News

Instead of the sober black garb favored by traditional bloodsuckers, self-proclaimed vampire Count Radu IV prances around in high-heeled go-go boots, sexy miniskirts and a black cape!

The flamboyant aristocrat's cross-dressing antics have earned him the mocking nickname "Count Drag-ula." And they've provoked the wrath of tourist officials and leaders of the vampire community, who consider him an embarrassment.

"It's taken 500 years for vampires to win the respect of people in this region and for our concerns to finally be taken seriously," says Nicolai Cesescu, director of the Society for the Advancement of Blood-drinkers.

"This outrageous conduct could set our movement back centuries. Count Radu is an utterly ridiculous figure — he's like a fanged, blood-drinking Ru Paul."

But gender-bending Count Radu insists there's nothing wrong with his penchant for panty hose, falsies and long black wigs.

"Vampirism has always been linked to expressing repressed sexuality," he declared, hands defiantly on his hips. "These stuffy old fogies in the blood-drinking world are too uptight to deal with that — not surprising, since some of them are six or seven hundred years old and look every day of it.

"I know I look terrific as a woman and I'm not going to stop dressing up."

The cross-dressing count is no spring chicken himself. He claims to be a long-in-the-tooth 148 years old and, strangely, church records appear to confirm that.

He lives in a well-appointed castle near Sighisoara, Hungary, in the region known as Transylvania. The town is the birthplace of his famous ancestor Vlad Dracula, the 15th-century warlord who inspired Bram Stoker's classic horror novel.

Vlad Dracula was notoriously brutal — his habit of GENDER-BENDER Radu IV will, on occasion, stop for a quick before-dinner drink with the opposite sex before flittering off to the nearest gay bar for a man-size meal!

dispatching his enemies on enormous wooden stakes earned him the nickname Vlad the Impaler.

By contrast, mascara-loving Count Radu's idea of a fun evening out is to doll himself up in a sequined evening gown and boogie at a popular disco catering to transvestites and other Eurotrash. He loves to pamper himself with scented bubble baths, paint his toenails and collect Judy Garland memorabilia.

most macho men who ever lived — he'd be turning in his grave if he knew how Radu was destroying the family name," said Cesescu.

"That is, of course, if Dracula were IN his grave and hadn't joined the Undead."

While his infamous forbear is best known for ripping out the throats of his helpless victims and terrorizing whole neighborhoods, Count Radu abhors violence wiles to get the blood he craves.

"The guy doesn't even attack people," complains Cesescu. "He'll go to a bar decked out in full drag and use his charms to lure men or even women back to his castle.

"Thinking he's a pretty woman and anxious to bed him, they'll agree to any kinky 'foreplay' he wants.

"That includes cutting their fingers with razor blades and filling a teacup, which — with his pinky sticking daintily out."

When the date tries to get sex in return, the crafty count simply hoists his skirt.

"That usually sends the hapless dupe running for his car," Cesescu said.

Romanian tourist officials are very concerned.

They recently announced plans to build a 265-acre Dracula theme park in the town and fear negative publicity surrounding Count legendary vampire's image. "Radu is ruining the whole Dracula mystique," fumed one angry official.

But while the flaky Transylvanian transvestite is taking some heat in Europe, American cross-dressers give him an encouraging, "You go, girl!"

"Count Radu should be commended for having the guts to be himself," said a spokesperson for the 1,200-member U.S. Association of

GIRL CRIES

It's a miraculous sign from God, say experts

By SANDRA JAMES
Weekly World News

LITTLE Hasnah Mohamed Meselmani has stunned family and friends — and mystified experts — by crying teardrops of real glass.

The pretty Lebanese girl was 12 years old when the astonishing phenomena began, and her crystal tears are being hailed as a miraculous sign from God by religious groups.

"We believe it was a real miracle," says Nabil Matraji, who represents the religious sect Share International, "and that she had been contacted by a messenger of God!"

And the truth about the amazing glass tears has come out, Nabil says, despite the Saudi Arabian government's attempt to silence the girl's family with $50,000 in hush money.

Hasnah's family is now risking everything to tell the world the truth of the crystal tears that poured miraculously from Hasnah's eyes — and the "white knight" who brought about the miracle.

The Lebanese girl was 12 when she began feeling tiny crystals falling from her eyes. The cut-glass tears kept flowing for the next two weeks. Doctors who examined her at an eye clinic were completely baffled and at a loss to explain was was happening.

The clinic's chief ophthalmologist finally told Hasnah's family he had no medical explanation for the tears — they had to be an act of God! Amazingly, her eyes were undamaged by the tear shards.

But that's only the beginning of Hasnah's miracle.

heard someone tapping at the window. I got up, walked to the window, and there I saw a man dressed in white. He was sitting on a white horse, he smiled at me and called me by name. He asked me if I would go outside to talk to him."

Hasnah followed him, and he told her that he was the one who'd turned her tears to glass. It was all part of God's will, he told her.

She asked him when the tears would stop, she says, "and he said, 'When God wills.'"

The crystal tears kept flowing, and Hasnah's father took her to another eye clinic — this time at American University Hospital in Beirut. The story leaked out, and media from around the world flocked to Lebanon to see the miracle for themselves.

Although independent witnesses watched the crystals fall from Hasnah's eyes — and although Saudi scientists certified that the crystals were real — skeptics insisted it had to be a trick.

They accused the family of fraud, charging that it was impossible for Hasnah to weep tears of sharp glass without damage to her eyes.

Share International's Nabil says Hasnah's father told him "that a lot of pressure was put on him to keep quiet about it all." The Saudi government even offered him a $30,000 payoff for keeping quiet.

The impoverished family took the money, and Hasnah stopped telling her story.

Nabil believes Hasnah's "white knight" was actually a spiritual master named Maitreya, whom the members of Share International believe is the Messiah who will save mankind at the end of the world.

Nabil convinced Hasnah's family to share her bizarre story with the world, and they are eager to do so, even though she's stopped crying glass tears.

"If the crystals appear again," Hasnah's father says, "then I will let the case be reopened. God's will must be done."

DEAD MEN PAY NO FINES!

A DRUNK DRIVER got slapped with a ticket for causing a fatal crash — but he's the one who was killed in the smash-up!

Cops in Bloomington, Ind., say the man was drunk when his car swerved off the road and crashed. Two months later, the dead man's name showed up on a list of charges including drunk driving.

Cops say they were required to write the ticket, but the offender won't be prosecuted from the grave.

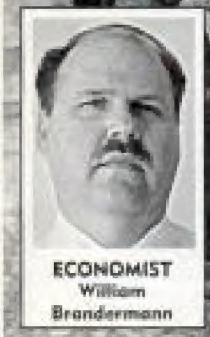
Frightened Federal Reserve Board Alan Greenspan warns President . . .

2ND DEP . . . IS

FEDERAL Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan.



ECONOMIST William Brandermann

UNEMPLOYMENT EXPECTED TO EXCEED 40% BY LABOR DAY!

A SHATTERING stock market crash, equal to the one that triggered the Great Depression and devastated the country for years, is set to strike America by the first of July!

And the situation is so dire, say White House sources, that President George Bush "literally shook like a leaf" — and then, a little later, "wiped tears from his eyes" — when Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan and other trusted financial advisors gathered in the Oval Office, warning him to prepare for:

- A stock market collapse that will bankrupt tens of thousands of investors and businesses and throw millions out of work — in the span of a few hours.
- Unemployment topping 30 percent by the Fourth of July and 40 percent by Labor Day.
- Millions being forced from their foreclosed homes and trailers by September.
- Unchecked violence, civil unrest and martial law as have-nots rise up in anger — and desperation — against Fortune 500 fat cats and other rich people who manage to hold on to their wealth despite the collapse.

- Pay cuts of 50 to 75 percent for working Americans as companies struggle to maintain profits and executive salaries while surviving the downturn.
- Rampant disease and epidemics fueled by unsanitary living conditions and lack of medical care in makeshift camps and shanty towns packed tight with the homeless and destitute.
- The rise of radical political parties on the left and the right, with communists and fascists — both promising economic salvation and battling for power in local and national arenas.

law-abiding middle-class citizens turn to drug-dealing, prostitution and even kidnapping and murder to support themselves and their families.

■ The devastation of Social Security and Medicare, which will leave the elderly struggling to survive. Both funds will be overtaxed to the max by the economic collapse and the massive layoffs will slash the incoming revenue that is used to pay current benefits.

College students, millions of them, will be booted from classes because they can no longer pay for books and tuition. Also, federal student loan funds will dry up.

Teenagers will go on a massive crime rampage to get money for luxuries they can no longer afford — CDs, albums, designer jeans, junk food and drugs.

■ Waves of emigrants — including those from families who have lived in the United States for generations — leaving the country in search of jobs and new lives in foreign lands.

■ The repossession of an estimated 100 million cars, light trucks and SUVs that ordinary Americans have overextended themselves to buy and will no longer be able to pay for.

■ So many bank failures that not even the FDIC will be able to cover the losses, leaving people with checking and savings accounts dead broke — and powerless to do anything about it.

And that's not all. According to former presidential advisor and economist G. William Brandermann, a financially weak and reeling America "will face serious new pressures from enemies in the Middle East, where Iraq and Iran are already threatening to slash oil production in order to create shortages and drive up the price of crude."

And we'll be more prone than ever, he warned, "to attacks by terrorists who'll almost certainly seize the opportunity to compound America's financial misery and do what Osama Bin Laden and his evil cronies failed to do in New York and Washington on 9-11 — deliver the knock-out punch that will lay democracy to waste once and for all."

"We've heard warnings about a Second Great Depression in the past, but this time it's not a matter of 'if' the bubble is going to burst, it's a matter of when the bubble is going to burst — and the fact is we've got just weeks to prepare for the most devastating economic downturn in history," declares Brandermann, who has close ties to the Bush White House and charges that "the major media are vastly under-reporting this dire and ominous threat" to our way of life.

"President Bush and Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan have been trying to put a good 'spin' on the economy," he adds, "saying we're pulling out of a recession even as thousands upon thousands of workers continue to be given pink slips.

"But they know the truth, and from what my sources tell me, Mr. Bush — who apparently shook like a leaf when Dr. Greenspan briefed him and then wiped tears from his eyes when everything sank in and he realized just how bad off we really

HONEYMOON HORROR

By CLIFF LINEDECKER/Weekly World News

NEWLYWEDS FORCED TO WATCH

A PAIR of frightened honeymooners fled in panic after they witnessed a ghostly clash between a huge slave and a mean-tempered overseer condemned to eternally repeat their deadly battle of nearly a century and a half ago.

The couple vowed never to return to Englehard, N.C., after watching in horror as the terrifying phantoms reenacted the fierce, bloody struggle that cost their lives in 1857.

"I've never been so scared in my life," Sean Zollicoffer told a local radio reporter after he and his bride, Susan, witnessed the demonic battle.

"Suzy and I just hung onto each other while these two monstrous, shadowy beings slashed and chopped at each other — we thought it would never end.

"We were both too scared even to scream."

The young North Judson, Ind., couple learned after returning to a bed-and-breakfast near the East Dismal Swamp, that the combatants in the chilling drama are well known in the area for repeating their fatal encounter on quiet nights when the moon is full.

A clerk at the hostel told them that the big slave with the powerful, rippling muscles was named Chat, and he was owned by a local Hyde County preacher, the Reverend Jim Watson.

Northern abolitionists had been in Hyde County secretly stirring up resentment among the slaves, and Chat was one of the leaders of what Reverend Watson and other local whites feared might develop into open rebellion.

Watson was a feeble old man and grew alarmed when he heard rumors that the burly field hand had been talking rebellion — and had even flashed a huge butcher knife to intimidate more timid slaves who wanted nothing to do with a revolt.

Chat made certain of capturing their attention by boldly slashing his own flesh to show his fearlessness, while he talked of the blood that he shed binding him to dark gods in the African motherland.

The old preacher finally

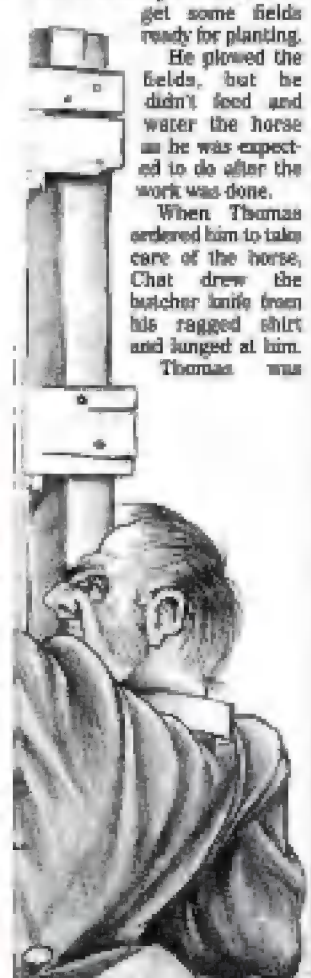
took his problem to Cade Thomas, an overseer on the nearby plantation of Dr. S.A. Long. Thomas had a reputation as a brutal man who enforced his will through liberal use of a blacksnake whip, and he readily accepted Rev. Watson's offer to loan him the services of the troublemaker. The overseer assured Rev. Watson it wouldn't take long for him to "break" Chat and that when the slave was returned, he would be meek and mild as a lamb.

But things didn't go quite that smoothly.

Shortly after his arrival, Chat was assigned a sturdy horse and a plow and told to get some fields ready for planting.

He plowed the fields, but he didn't feed and water the horse as he was expected to do after the work was done.

When Thomas ordered him to take care of the horse, Chat drew the butcher knife from his ragged shirt and lunged at him.



Thomas was carrying a garden hoe and swung it at his attacker, but Chat sidestepped the blow and plunged the knife into the overseer's chest. Mortally wounded, Thomas fell back and drew his pistol, firing a single shot that struck and killed Chat.

The overseer and the slave were buried in rough plots on the plantation, but the anger, hatred and violence that marked their deaths refused to allow them to pass peacefully into eternal rest.

One night exactly one year after the men died, a teenager ran into the slave quarters, gasping that he had seen Chat and Thomas fighting and tearing at each other on the edge of a mist and moonlight shrouded field.

The youngster's excited report was nervously laughed off until a night about a week later when two older slaves watched a similar reenactment.

Then white residents of the plantation house began to report similar experiences.

Sightings peaked during the dreadful slaughter of the Civil War, then dropped sharply. But periodically over the years until the present time, witnesses have surfaced who recount watching the savage, silent death struggle between the slave and the overseer.

HOLY COW! DOCS CREATE HALF-DOG, HALF-PONY

By GERRY RINGWALD/Weekly World News

DNA scientists in Germany have used gene-splicing technology to create an amazing new hybrid that's a cross between a husky and a Shetland pony!

Named "Schnitzel," the incredible half-dog, half-horse barks like a canine, wags its tail when excited and can deliver a powerful bite with its razor-sharp teeth, yet trots along on hoofs and enjoys giving rides to small children.

"Our creation combines the best of both species — the speed and simple dietary needs of a horse, with the intelligence and loyalty of a canine," declared Dr. Heinrich von Frunkenstrasse, lead researcher on the project, at a news conference.

It seems like only yesterday that the world was agog over the announcement that British researchers had cloned Dolly the sheep, the first mammal ever. But experts at the Stuttgart Academy of Science have far exceeded that now-modest achievement by becoming the first to successfully combine the DNA of two radically different animals to create a viable new species.

Over three years ago, the researchers quietly embarked on the experiment, code-named "Das Operation Barken-Hooten." Their ambitious goal was to splice genes from a carnivore (a flesh-eater) to those of a herbivore (a vegetarian.) They chose an Alaskan husky because of their strength and endurance and a Shetland pony because of its low center of gravity and tangle free tail.

"We Germans pride ourselves on our engineering," Dr. von Frunkenstrasse said. "This pooch pony will be the ultimate running machine, with a dog's canniness added to a horse's natural quickness. The animal could serve as an ideal watchdog, able to run and get help with blinding speed.

"It can stop on a dime — and really corner."

"Also, having the long hair of a Shetland pony, it could be an excellent source of material for winter coats."

After the canine genes were spliced into those of a horse embryo in a laboratory, the altered embryo was surgically implanted into the womb of an ordinary female Shetland pony.

Eleven months ago, the mare delivered the first prototype, Schnitzel.

Weighing less than a sack of flour at birth, Schnitzel now tips the scales at over 175 pounds. To accommodate the special dietary needs of a half-Canis familiaris, half-Equanis caballus, the pooch-pony is fed a delicately balanced mixture of oat meal needed to feed an ordinary husky," the scientist noted. "They'll be able to run outside and fill up on grass."

The genetically engineered creature's behavior reflects its dual nature. Sometimes Schnitzel is docile and compliant on walks, plodding along like a horse at a petting zoo. Other times it's as frisky as a puppy, bounding through the snow together into a thick, brownish snap.

"These animals will be very cost-effective to maintain, because owners won't have to buy the large quantity

'The pooch-pony is an ideal watchdog' gallops after squirrels on the laboratory grounds.

Two weeks ago, Schnitzel was taken out of the compound for the first time, to stretch his legs in the open countryside. "The only way to truly find out what you have," explained the scientist, "is to take a test drive."

Researchers ran the half-horse, half-dog creature through a grueling gauntlet of outdoor obstacles, including a treacherous mountain pass, but nothing derailed him.

"Like a full-breed husky, he had no trouble coping with the cold and had the savvy to seek shelter in caves, something an ordinary Shetland pony wouldn't have the brainpower to do. Yet he could also achieve speeds of up to 55 m.p.h. on the open snow — revealing a trained racehorse."

The scientists' mammalhefty government grant and with the stunning success officials hope that mass-produced pooch-ponies could soon be one of Germany's biggest exports.

"They'd make ideal pets — what child, German, British, or American, wouldn't want one," a commerce official noted.

What's more, with this kind of "horsepower" under the hood, Germany is now the hands-on favorite to win the Iditarod dogsled race in 2000.

"Give me six of these creatures and I will bring home the Gold," vows Otto Kreutzer.

TINSELTOWN TOUGH GUYS ARE A BUNCH OF SKIRT-WEARING SISSIES

RUSSELL CROWE wore a skirt and carried a dagger in 2000's The Gladiator.

We need more Dukes and Rocks and fewer Crowes!

I'm madder than John Wayne with a jammed six-shooter over plans I hear to have that foreigner Russell Crowe star in a new movie about Davy Crockett!

What's wrong with Hollywood? Besides being from a country settled by convicts that has nothing but funny looking wild animals and lots of beer to its credit, this Crowe guy is more like a parakeet.

Think about it: In his last two big movies he played an Italian guy in a miniskirt with a short little knife and everyone knows the Italians can't really fight because they're too busy drinking and changing sides. Even the Ethiopians with a 4-foot-9-inch "God king" kicked their butts in the 1930s. Then everyone gets all gaga about Crowe as a wimpy college professor who talks to invisible friends and draws on windows.

I've got news for Hollywood: Davy Crockett wasn't any Aussie! Like the song says he was "Born on a mountain top in Tennessee, greenest state in the land of the free" and he "kill him a b'ar when he was only three," and, believe me, it wasn't any cuddly koala b'ar.

Davy Crockett wasn't any pansy in a tweed professor suit. And the only knife he carried was a big ol' Bowie knife given to him by his pal Jim Bowie who also died defending us from illegal aliens at the Alamo!

Hollywood is running low on rugged real American he men. Gary Cooper and the Duke are ghost riders in the sky. Dirty Harry turned into a sissy a long time ago taking pictures of bridges in Iowa, and none of these pimple-faced squirts like Sean Penn or Brad Pitt could piss in a cowboy boot and pour it out if the directions were written on the heel.

Even the original Davy Crockett, Fess Parker, has gone soft — running a winery in California! It's enough to drive a man to drink and I don't mean a wine spritzer.

The only guys left who can kick some Indian, Mexican and grizzly perfect, except his funny looking eyes — which were perfect for plugging an Egyptian Cockroach King — remind me too much of those guys who tried to kill me on Pork Chop Hill.

Hulk Hogan would make one fine Davy Crockett, though. If he'd lose that Fu Manchu mustache. Or a for Bronco Nagurski and he's dead. Hollywood needs to look to America for its next Davy Crockett.

And while they're at it, they just need to change one little detail whenever they start filming. This time, we win at the Alamo!

YOUR DREAMS TE

...about your neighbors!

Your dreams really are packed with hidden meaning — about your neighbors, an eye-opening new study reveals!

Research psychologists now say that dreams are actually telepathic messages received from those around us.

"While we're asleep, our minds are open to the thoughts of others," explains British researcher Dr. Lionel Edmonson.

"Thus, your dreams may tell you nothing about your own hidden wishes, but speak volumes about the secret desires of your next-door neighbor."

The findings help explain why dreams often seem "confusing and meaningless to us," added the London expert.

Dr. Edmonson and his team reached the startling conclusion after studying 150 volunteers in a sleep lab over a six-month period. Daily interviews confirmed that the volunteers' dreams had little to do with their own waking lives, but often reflected the desires, conflicts and real-life experiences of fellow volunteers who snoozed in adjoining rooms.

"In one striking case, a female subject dreamed about having an angry confrontation with a strange woman with red hair," Dr. Edmonson said.

"Nothing like that had happened to her that day. But earlier that evening, the subject in the next room, a 44-year-old man, had experienced a heated quarrel with his wife — a woman with long, fire-engine-red hair."

DREAMS about sex with your neighbor means there's some hanky-panky going on next door.

The breakthrough discovery throws new light on the true nature of human dreams, the expert points out.

"It turns out just about everyone who's written about dreams, from Aristotle to Sigmund Freud, has been off the mark," said Dr. Edmonson.

"Dreams are not warnings from the gods, messages from the subconscious, nor the random firings of neurons. They're a form of telepathic communication."

Dreams give us a "fascinating mentally peek" into our neighbors' lives, he said.

Here, from the expert, are some common dreams and what they tell you about the folks next door:

- Falling — Dreams about falling are very literal, usually taking place after a neighbor has taken a minor spill at home.
- Having "one last exam" to take before graduation — A dream of this kind invariably means a neighbor's kid feels

● Sex — Dreaming frequently about romance with a neighbor's curvy wife or hunky husband points to robust sexual relations going on next door. "However, an erotic dream about your OWN spouse generally indicates that your neighbor is lusting after your mate," Dr Edmonson said.

2ND GREAT DEPRESSION

are — will address the country when the time is right, probably within two weeks.

"This is a delicate and terrifying situation. The President needs to tell Americans what's happening, but he can't risk jumping the gun and sparking a public panic.

"The last thing we need is a run on the banks and citizens going wild in the streets. And if you don't think that can happen, you aren't familiar with the first Great Depression.

"Stockbrokers and businessmen and even ordinary people behaved in ways that nobody could have predicted.

"They jumped out of buildings, for God's sake — and they stole from their neighbors, their friends and even their own mothers just to keep a little food in their bellies. I don't want to be an alarmist," he continued, "but quite frankly, I see worse than that happening now.

"This is a different world than the one our parents and grandparents lived in. It's a more impersonal world and people can be meaner.

"I'm frightened by the prospect of how younger Americans who have never endured hardship will react to hunger, fear, joblessness and want. The President and his advisors are worried sick, too. They're the ones who started calling this the 'Second Great Depression' — not me.

"And they don't use terms like that for the fun of it, that's for sure."

White House spokesmen declined to comment on Brandermann's report, calling it "premature" and assuring reporters that Bush "has done an excellent job of keeping the American public up-to-date on the economy and there is no reason to believe that he will not do so in the future."

Privately, however, sources sing a different tune.

As one highly placed Washington insider put it: "What the hell is Bush supposed to say: 'My fellow Americans, you're toast — kiss your cash, your jobs, your home, your car and your food goodbye?'

"Come on! He's got no choice but to wait until it happens, and then get on TV and tell people to stay calm and hang in there until the government can get a handle on just how bad things are and then do whatever they can to keep the country from blowing apart at the seams."

While the White House monitors the situation and develops a battle-plan for the country, the super-rich are doing what they historically have done when faced with impending financial crisis.

"They're preparing for the absolute worst," says Brandermann, who advised President Richard M. Nixon on price controls and other aspects of the economy in the early 1970s.

"They're stockpiling food and medical supplies, improving security around their homes, selling stocks and converting cash to gold while paper money still has value.

"Should you do the same? I did. Remember: Depressions aren't only severe, they are exceptionally cruel — and they tend to last a long time. Things will get worse before they get better.

"God help you if you

Dear Dotti

AMERICA'S MOST OUTSPOKEN ADVICE COLUMNIST

Crazy drivers keep trying to mow me down

Dear Dotti: I am an avid bicycle rider, and since I pay taxes I think I have a right to ride on the road. A lot of other people don't think so and they try to run over me.

I ride a lot on mountain roads and I ride in the middle of the lane because there's no shoulder and it's very gravely on the sides. I can't tell you how many people have honked at me, shot me the finger, and actually tried to hit me! I've started wearing a sign on my back that says "I have a right to be here too" and it's only made matters worse. Any suggestions? — Two Wheeler in Sheridan

Dear Two Wheeler: Grow up, join the 21st century and shell out for some wheels! The only people who should ride bikes are children and preferably without those sissy helmets or silly Spandex outfits. I make it a point to squeeze every yuppie bike rider I see over to the side of the road and, if I'm really skillful, into a ditch whenever one of them hogs the road!

Psycho ex is trying to make me pay child support

Dear Dotti: I am divorced from a psychotic woman who got custody of our kids. I never wanted to have children and was really mad when she let herself get pregnant. I left after the fourth kid was born because I was fed up with her popping out kids left and right. Now she wants child support and has the law after me. They're threatening to garnish my wages. I don't think the sow deserves anything. She'll just blow the money on cigarettes and booze. Is there a way out of this mess? — Reluctant Dad in Biloxi

Dear Reluctant: Yes, there is a way out. Next time put a cap — and I'm not talking about a thinking cap, because you obviously aren't familiar with the concept — on the part of your body you've been thinking with. It takes two to tango, or in your case, tangle and make a mess of it. You're a pathetic excuse for a human being and you're paying for falling asleep in sex education class. That is if you ever went to school to begin with.

Too-tall friend's dating a pint-sized freak

Dear Dotti: I have a friend who is in love with a dwarf. I am not kidding. She's an elegant woman, almost 6 feet tall and here she is willing to be seen with a guy three feet shorter than her. They've asked me and my husband out to dinner again. It's so embarrassing to go anywhere with them because people stare at us. He's a nice enough guy. He's quite successful in real estate and makes more money than any of us, but I don't think I can stand another evening out with them. I don't want to hurt my friend. Is there some way I can decline nicely? — Mortified in Boston

Dear Mortified: Let me get this straight. Your girlfriend has a wealthy boyfriend who makes her happy despite the difference in their sizes, but you're not happy about it? Frankly, you sound as if you're jealous that you didn't find a millionaire dwarf before she did. If she wants to date a rich freak and pay for you and your jerk of a husband, too, that's entirely her business, toots! Either shut up or find another generous 6-foot friend who dates someone you approve of.

I'm ready to blow a hole in my stupid neighbor's truck

Dear Dotti: My neighbor has one of those fancy SUVs with a sensitive alarm that goes off if the wind changes direction. I can't tell you how many times I've woken up at 3 a.m. with that stupid alarm blaring. And the moron isn't even around to shut the thing off, because he's always staying over with his girlfriend. The other night I left a note on the windshield that said I had a ".45" and if the darn alarm goes off again, I planned to use it until I ran out of bullets or the siren stopped. Last night it went off again for over an hour. I don't have a gun. It was just a bluff to get his attention. Should I buy one and carry out my threat? He obviously did not get the message. — Alarmed in San Pedro

Dear Alarmed: That will teach you to make threats you can't carry out! But if you've got the guts, sure, go ahead and pack some heat and see what happens. I'm betting you'll be behind bars faster than his siren stops wailing.

CONFIDENTIALS

Weak Knees in Akron: Your knees aren't the weakest part of your anatomy, buster. Your spine needs some cement, too. If you're too scared to ask her, what makes you think I want to go out of my way to be your stupid Cupid?

Busted Flat in Baton Rouge: Get a patch and start pumping and next time invest in something other than a retread. If you haven't learned after marrying the same guy four times, there's nothing I can say that will get you on the road of love for the long haul.

Patent Pending in Telluride: Your "invention" looks like the work of three great men: Larry, Moe and Curly.

Oral Fixation in Fremont: Honey, I hate to tell you, but word from the brothels lately is that you wouldn't even be a mouthful for anyone, even if your plane and a Brazilian soccer team crashed in the Andes.

Reincarnation experts stunned by amazing case!

ENGLISH SCHOOLBOY BEFORE — AS NAZI A

Even as a tot, he told about his missions as a flying ace!

A German airman who was killed in 1942 when his plane was shot down over Great Britain was reincarnated decades later as an English schoolboy.

From the age of 3, Carl Edon of Middlesbrough, England, astounded his parents with stories of a prior life as a gunner in the notorious German Luftwaffe.

Although never exposed to World War II history, the youngster:

- Accurately drew the instrument panel of a German bomber.
- Described vividly his former hometown near the infamous Nazi death camp Auschwitz — right down to the stench of the crematoriums.
- Briefed his folks on his bombing missions, including his final, ill-fated flight.
- Chatted about his fatal injuries in grisly detail, such as the fact that his right leg was severed in the crash.

Tragically, Carl was stabbed to death in 1995 at the age of 32, but since then astonishing proof has surfaced to back up his strange story.

Recently, a local historian discovered a photo of Oberfeldwebel Heinrich Richter, a Luftwaffe turret gunner who died at age 24 when his plane crashed in Middlesbrough during a raid on Jan. 15, 1942 — and the German flier bears an uncanny resemblance to Carl.

Also, the wreckage of Richter's long-missing bomber was found — oddly enough, just a few hundred yards from the spot Carl had been stabbed to death. Incredibly, Richter's right leg had been severed in the crash and was still in his boot — just as Carl had always maintained.

Carl's parents Jim and Val Edon were once skeptical of their son's wild claims, but that changed forever when they were shown the airman's picture.

Mrs. Edon took one look in Richter's eyes and knew he was her son.

"It's got to be him," she told a British newspaper. "The resemblance across the eyes and nose is uncanny. There are just too many strange coincidences."

Police inspector Tom Stoddart, who investigated Carl's murder, admitted that even hardnosed cops were blown away by the eerie case. "In 25 years with the police I have never encountered anything like this," he told reporters. "It proves there are things which are beyond our comprehension."

For the Edon family, the bizarre journey into The Twilight Zone began in 1975, when 3-year-old toddler Carl started casually telling his startled folks about a previous existence as a German gunner.

"One day he drew the instrument panel of an old German bomber," his father told the Newcastle Chronicle and Journal. "I checked in the library and it was correct in every detail.

"We never had war books at home yet he could draw a swastika and other German emblems from just 3 years old. He spoke of how he saluted Hitler at a rally and the uniform he wore.

"Once, when he was 8, there was a war film on television. Carl pointed to a German and said he was like his sergeant but his badge was on the wrong lapel. I checked again with the library and Carl was right."

Carl told his parents how his "other dad" used to take him for walks in the woods near his village and how his "other mom" made soup. He retained a strong preference for German foods — especially sausages, Mrs. Edon recalls.

The tot told his parents there was a strange smell in his hometown because it was near Auschwitz and that he had joined the Luftwaffe at the tender age of 19.

"He just wasn't like other children," said Mrs. Edon, who noted that other kids taunted him cruelly for his seemingly outlandish beliefs.

After Carl's remarkable case was reported in local papers, he was studied by many top reincarnation researchers and featured in a 1991 book on kids who recall past lives, The Children that Time Forgot, by Peter and Mary Harrison.

Carl grew up to become a railway worker. And in 1995, he was stabbed to death near the tracks following a quarrel with a co-worker, who was later jailed for life.

Two years later in 1997, a few hundred yards from the murder scene, workmen digging a pipeline discovered the buried wreckage of the long-missing Dornier 217 E-4 bomber — along with the mortal remains of Heinrich Richter.

"As a boy Carl spoke of how he died when his plane crashed," Carl's father Jim recalled. "He said he lost a leg in the crash and died from loss of blood. The first thing the workmen found of Herr Richter was a severed leg."

Subsequent research revealed that Richter hailed from the village of Herischdorf — which really was near Auschwitz, just as Carl had said.

To cap it off, a few months ago, researcher Bill Norman uncovered the photo showing the striking resemblance between the two men. "At first I was skeptical, but now I am convinced that Carl really did have a previous life," said his dad.

Both parents believed strongly enough that they attended the solemn ceremony in which Richter's body was finally laid to rest.

"People will find it hard to believe, but yes, I do believe I am burying my son for a second time," Mrs. Edon said at the time.

Paranormal researchers say the links between the two men are too many to ignore. Intriguingly, they even made the same journey the day they died.

Before Richter's plane crashed, it first bombed a factory in the town of Skinningrove and flew on to Middlesbrough, following the railway line.

On the day of his death, Carl transported several railroad cars from Skinningrove to Middlesbrough — retracing exactly the same final path his double had taken a half century earlier.

David Murray of the Society for Psychical Research, told a reporter: "We research a lot of reincarnation cases, but not many as remarkable as

DOPES OF THE WEEK

1. At least they found the leak

TWO MEN blew up in an explosion when one of them flicked on a cigarette lighter — while checking for a gas leak.

The gas-company workers had been called to check out the leak at a warehouse in west Texas. They entered the building and tried to turn on the lights, but all the power had been turned off for safety.

So one of the men pulled out the cigarette lighter and clicked it on. Not a trace of the two men was ever found after the blast — which sent pieces of the warehouse as far as three miles away.

2. Fire gal's job up in smoke

HER BOSSES say a firefighter drove the wrong way when taking her team to a blaze — and later in the day fired up a marijuana joint. So they suspended her.

"I'm saddened that this event happened," Seattle Fire Chief Gary Morris said. "This member let us down."

The 17-year veteran of the fire department was suspended for two months after she tested positive for marijuana and volunteered to go through drug treatment. She was transferred to a different station when she returned to duty, and took a 5 percent pay cut because she's not allowed to drive for a year.

3. Man killed in safety demo

A MAN CRASHED through a pane of glass and plunged 24 floors to his death — while trying to demonstrate the safety of the glass!

Toronto cops said lawyer Garry Hoy, 38, was showing a group of law students how safe the glass in the Toronto Dominion Bank Tower was. He shoved his shoulder against the I'm searching for the couple who saved my life!

Dear Serena: Several years ago, a tornado swept through our mobile home community and my family and I lost everything we owned.

A kindhearted elderly couple saved us, took us in and gave us food and shelter until we got our lives back on track. Unfortunately, we've lost contact with them since, but our lives have changed so much for the better that we want to thank them in a special, financial way. Can you help me find them? — Grateful in Great Bend

Dear Grateful: I have gazed into my crystal ball and found them! Your gift will be more than welcome and just what they need right now because he is suffering from health problems, and while your fortunes have had an upswing, they are hurting and need your help. I have sent you their current address and phone number as well as blessings to all of you for helping each other out in times of need.

Dear Serena, I am a 27-year-old virgin and I met this really great guy and I think I want to have sex with him. It's the first time I have felt this strongly about any man, but I'm not sure that I should trust him. I just don't want to get hurt and at the same time have my pureness taken away. What should I do? — Saving Myself in Oshen

Dear Saving: I cast my rune stones after putting your letter in my blessings basket because this is a very special and personal matter. In three out of four throws, your stone was "wunjo" or "joy" when asked if you should take this big step. The first stone was "jera" which represents fertility. So the signs are good but a little mixed if you don't want a child at the moment.

Dear Serena: I like this cute guy, but he keeps putting the "moves" on me. For example, when we are together in public he will grab my butt or say, "Got any fries or a cheeseburger with that shake?" Is this normal? I don't have much dating experience. Or have I found a diamond in the rough? — Manhandled in Brooklyn

Dear Manhandled: I am sorry to say that your "diamond" is more like a lump of coal. In your heart, you know you need to leave him. But have patience in dealing with the aftermath and you will enjoy a clear-headed understanding — and find a new love with someone who respects you in the process. My blessings to you!

KKK SKELETONS FOUND IN TITANIC LIFE RING

AMAZING
LETS YOU

INVENTOR Alex Chiu insists he's discovered the Fountain of Youth — an amazing device that smoothes away wrinkles, cures disease and lets you live thousands of years!

And his gadget will also make you beautiful — as gorgeous as his favorite star Alicia Silverstone, he claims.

"My devices," says the 31-year-old Chinese Chiu, "are believed to alter the aging process — to turn a person physically younger. They are believed to allow humans to stay physically young forever, cure various kinds of illnesses and diseases, and improve health."

His astonishing treatment is simple and safe. All the patient has to do is wear special magnetic rings and bracelets on the fingers and toes.

And this modern-day Ponce de Leon — the famed Spanish explorer who searched for the Fountain of Youth — has an armload of testimonials about the miraculous gizmos, which use the body's own magnetic field to zap disease, battle aging to a halt — and put the POW back in your sex life!

"I am so excited about this I am speechless," says John, 49, whose doctors were threatening to chop off his foot because they thought he'd get gangrene from advanced diabetes.

"I am now out of the wheelchair for the first time in five years," John says, "walking again like some miracle has happened to me."

A cured cocaine addict named Rob says he "went from crackhood back to being a second-grade teacher in a matter of weeks — just by wearing Chiu's Eternal Life Device.

"I owe Alex my job and my life," gushes Bob.

And check out the amazing experience of Hux, whose girlfriend is even more pleased than he is about the power of the rings:

"Ever since I put it on," he says, "I am much stronger. My girlfriend says I'm feeling much bigger and — wow! I can go for three or four hours now."

One bald woman says her hair's growing back since she's been wearing the rings, and another man claims he's smarter — and his I.Q. shot up 30 points!

Chiu, who was born in San Francisco, raised in Taiwan, and has a degree from City College in San Francisco, says he received a patent on "the most important invention in the world — immortality" in 1998.

on the body's natural magnetic energy field, he explains, leading to improved blood flow. This increases the body's power to heal itself — and revs up the metabolism, slowing or even reversing the aging process!

"Your fingers and toes are the transistors of the body," Chiu says, explaining that a transistor switches energy on and off. The magnetized rings and braces amplify the energy that's switched on.

"By wearing the Eternal Life Device," he says, "you should immediately experience a very powerful energy flowing through your body ... This powerful energy helps your body reheal. Which means your wounds, scars and other damaged cells will reheal."

Chiu isn't the first alternative-health practitioner to tout the medical benefits of magnets — but he's the first to claim it's a fountain of youth. And he's not out just to make a buck off his beliefs.

He's so sure his devices work — and so eager to help the world — that he even offers free directions for making the Eternal Life Device through his Web site, www.alexchiu.com. He even gives the ready-made devices — for free — to anyone who helps him spread the word.

CHIU claims his patented invention will make everyone as beautiful as lovely actress Alicia Silverstone.

Skunk helps cops nab suspect

COPS chasing a fleeing suspect through the forest had no difficulty sniffing the guy out — after a skunk sprayed him in the face!

Police in Lewiston, Maine, are hailing the striped, pint-sized crime-stopper as a hero.

"Sometimes we get help from where we don't expect it," Police Lt. Tom Avery told a reporter. "We're calling this skunk Officer Pepe LePew."

The suspect, who was wanted for violating release conditions stemming from a domestic assault, had fled into the woods following a traffic stop, say cops.

There the hapless fugitive ran head-on into the skunk, which promptly squirted him with its potent spray.

The juice was powerful enough to "pretty much incapacitate him," Lt. Avery revealed.

Officers caught up with the suspect — but hauling him in wasn't much fun. By the time the prisoner got to the police station, the squad car stunk to high heaven!

Bum blasts buddy — over deodorant!

A HOMELESS man shot and killed one of his pals — in a fight over deodorant!

Lawmen in Palo Alto, Calif., are still shaking their heads over the death of Joe Carney, a homeless man they say was shot dead by fellow vagrant Ron McKean.

"It's just tragic," said prosecutor Jeff Rosen, "that one human took another human's life because of an argument over deodorant."

Cops say McKean accused Carney of tossing McKean's deodorant stick into the trash. He pulled out a gun and blasted his buddy.

Witnesses say McKean then lit up a cigarette while waiting for cops to HOPPING-MAD BEATS UP — after he asks her to clean his house!

"I MIGHT do strange men for money, but I don't do windows!"

That's what 23-year-old hooker Julie "Roxy" Wittman told English cops who arrested her after she allegedly savagely beat a client within an inch of his life after he demanded that she clean his house — on top of performing her traditional services for him.

The battered, bloody, partially nude, comatose body of 48-year-old businessman Jonathan Temple was found by an associate in his posh Knightsbridge home, smeared with foam oven cleaner, lemon scented furniture polish, and — as Detective Inspector Tyler Hart said delicately — "with a bottle of glass cleaner forcibly inserted in one orifice."

Wittman's business card from an upscale London escort service was also found at the scene and led to her arrest, Hart said.

'I don't do windows'

"At first we thought it might have been a bout of rough, kinky play that got out of hand," Hart stated. "The victim was known in some circles as having, shall we say, 'specialized tastes and specific demands' when it came to his personal needs, but an interview with Ms. Wittman revealed a different scenario."

In an exclusive interview with Weekly World News, Wittman was more outspoken.

"I thought it was going to be a normal session," she said. "I thought, 'Oh, the usual Frenchy fetish.' But when I got there the bloke told me he also wanted me to scrub his bathroom and kitchen, clean his oven, wash his windows and thoroughly dust his crummy collection of Star Trek action figures.

"I've provided a lot of kinky services in my time, but I have my professional pride and I draw the line at cleaning house — especially washing windows!"

Enraged by Temple's unusual demands, Wittman said she went berserk.

"I admit I went a bit bonkers. He's only a small bloke anyway, and I had no real trouble putting him on his arse with a mop handle to his precious family jewels. Then I went to town, screaming 'You want spic 'n' span, you filthy, bleedin' sod? I'll give you a proper dusting!'

"I must say his home was well stocked with supplies. After I gave him a couple of shiners with the business end of a stainless steel handled squeegee I polished 'em with some lovely smelling furniture wax, Swedish oil, I believe it was. Must have cost him a fortune."

Temple is recovering at London's Royal Marsden Hospital from a skull fracture, a broken leg and other injuries. "I figured as long as she was there," he explained, "she could tidy up the place." An unrepentant Wittman has been booked on assault Street gangs new weapon of choice: Potato guns!

ALARMED law-enforcement officials are warning about the latest new weapon of choice for youth gangs: homemade air guns that fire potatoes up to 200 yards!

The spud-shooting weapons, known as "potato launchers," are most popular in rural areas, where juvenile delinquents don't have easy access to more traditional gang weapons such as handguns, Uzis and AK-47s.

In Michigan, the problem has become so epidemic that worried authorities are acting to ban the weapons — before they kill. After seizing four potato launchers, the East Grand Rapids Public Safety Department recently adopted a "zero-tolerance" policy.

Anyone who launches a potato in public is now subject to a $500 fine and up to 90 days in the slammer.

One ingeniously designed potato-launcher seized by authorities used air pressure to send spuds airborne — and could propel a medium-

DEVOUT CHRISTIAN ATTACKED — and HE's the one fined!

By KATE McCLARE Weekly World News

AN OLD MAN preaching his strict Bible beliefs was attacked by a mob who didn't like his ideas. But he was the one who got fined for harassment — not the people who ganged up on him!

Lawmen in Bournemouth, England, say street-corner evangelist Harry Hammond broke a law against "causing others to feel alarmed, threatened or distressed."

Cops arrested him because he wouldn't stop his anti-homosexual preaching after the gay-rights thugs whined that it upset them.

Holy Harry was in the Bournemouth town square, reading Bible passages and brandishing a sign that urged: "Stop immorality. Stop homosexuality. Stop lesbianism."

Sources say the 69-year-old retired bank clerk gives the street-corner sermon twice a week, without any problems.

But this time, he was suddenly surrounded by a gang of gay-rights thugs who heckled him and threw mud and water at him. In the scuffle, Harry's sign cut one of the hecklers on the head.

One of the gay protesters complained to cops that he felt threatened by the elderly evangelist's anti-homosexual talk. Harry refused to leave, and was arrested for harassment.

Hayla Scher, the judge in the case, fined Harry and ordered him to pay court costs.

She said Harry "was aware that his sign was abusive, threatening or insulting. His actions provoked violence and public disorder, and when he was asked to leave by police he failed to do so."

Harry says he'll appeal.

"In the Bible," he said, "homosexual acts are condemned in no uncertain terms. But I would never treat a homosexual. I would help them as much as I would help a drug addict or an alcoholic. My aim is to get people to recognize they are sinners and that they need to repent."

The case made headlines around England. One London newspaper called the judge "gutless" and her decision "drivel," and lectured that "the law is supposed to punish actions, not thoughts."

Preacher faces jail time for dressing down nudes

A PREACHER who rained fire and brimstone upon a nudist faces up to 90 days in jail.

Ralph Ovadal was convicted of disorderly conduct for harassing a woman at a popular nude beach in Wisconsin.

Ovadal and other Bible thumpers from Wisconsin Christians United went to the beach and thundered insults at a woman who had just unloaded her bicycle and dogs for a day of fun there.

They surrounded her and started shouting that she was a "whore, harlot and Jezebel."

He had previously called the nude beach an "open-air peep show" for the "sexually perverse elite who want to have this little beachfront hustled."

The puritanical preacher claimed the woman had provoked him by swearing at him and doing a sexy "jig."

MUSLIM HAS FIGHTING SPIRIT!

MUSLIM MARINE Ghazanfar Hussain is fighting mad at terrorists who murder in the name of his religion, and he vows to bring them to justice.

"It made me very angry when Al Qaeda used my religion on September 11 to justify what they did," says the 22-year-old Brit whose family is of Pakistani blood. Gung-ho Ghazanfar is the only Muslim member of Britain's Royal Marine force to be stationed at Bagram Air Base in Afghanistan. He follows the Koran's rules against drinking and smoking, and prays as often as possible.

"There is no suicide bombing in the Koran," he says. "They are just simple terrorists. Their faith is false. When we go up there to sort them out, not only will I be doing my job — I'll also be doing right by my religion.

"They need to be stopped and

STORE SLAMMED FOR SELLING G-STRINGS TO LITTLE GIRLS!

A leading chain store has unleashed a storm of controversy for marketing a line of ultra-sexy thong panties and provocative padded bras to girls as young as 9!

By VICKIE YORK
Weekly World News

The British store Argos was flooded with angry phone calls from horrified parents appalled to see the barely-there G-strings and other steamy lap-dancer-type lingerie in the store's Argos Additions catalog.

Incredibly, fashion gurus anticipate that the sexy new underwear trend will spread to America by back-to-school time next fall. And experts warn that the fallout could be a "tidal wave" of child-molestation.

"Forcing girls into sexual roles before they've reached an appropriate age is wrong and dangerous," blasts child-welfare crusader Kim Sayborn of London. "These outrageous get-ups make young girls look like sleazy strippers and the children end up sending out signals that they're sexually available. What's next? Pasties, high heels and garter belts for collecting tips?

"Just remember how JonBenet Ramsey used to get all dolled up and was turned into a sex object — and don't forget the tragic way she ended up."

Known as the "Tammy" line, the bottom-baring G-string drawers are designed for girls ages 9 to 16. Looking like the kind of eye-popping panties a raunchy rock star like Madonna might haul on to seduce a lover, the shocking line includes a pink, Valentine-themed thong with "I Love Me" emblazoned on the front.

In keeping with the stripper motif, the catalog hawks the suggestive undies in a photo that actually shows them on a clothesline along with fur boas and feathers.

Prominent child-protection groups, including Kidscape and Childline, begged Argos to discontinue the line and at least one angry member of Parliament urged customers to boycott.

Respected psychologist Richard Beckett, who treats sicko sex offenders, warned in a London paper, The Mail on Sunday that the outrageous undies would encourage child sexual abuse.

After being raked over the coals by the London press and bombarded by complaints, the caught-with-its-pants-down chain reluctantly agreed to yank the racy undies.

"We have decided to withdraw the thongs from our catalogs following a number of concerns we have had from our customers," said an Argos spokesperson in an April 27 statement.

"They were disappointed that a family-oriented business like Argos would sell products such as these.

"We have had enough e-mails and telephone calls from our customers to make us take the decision that we should stop selling thongs."

COURT RULES: PIGS PART OF THE FAMILY

400-pound porkers watch TV, burp, fart and snore just like her husband, says wife

THREE NOT-SO-LITTLE pigs are being allowed to remain in their owners' home, after a legal battle with the neighbors.

Maggie Park said she's "happy as a pig in mud" that an Australian court has decided her pet pigs Lily Lucy and Oliver — who weigh about 440 pounds apiece — don't need a special permit to stay in the house with Maggie and her husband Neil.

And she said they'd have moved away if the ruling had gone against them. "They're part of our family. You don't get rid of your kids."

The trouble began when some of the Parks' neighbors said the home-loving hogs were smelly and noisy, and tried to keep the pig-loving Parks from getting a permit.

Maggie defended her pigs' honor. "I'd prefer to have my pigs in the house than a lot of people that I have had in the house or kids who are noisy and messy and smelly. They give you a lot of love and affection."

The Parks, who don't have children, lavish affection on the three spoiled swine. They have the run of the house, and even sleep in their own bedroom — complete with mattresses, blankets and an enormous pet door.

And pig-mom Maggie says the three porkers are in hog heaven when they're quietly watching their favorite TV programs with the family. Lucy also jumps onto the Parks' bed at night to keep them company.

"She burps and farts and snores — everything my husband does, so I'm pretty used to it," Maggie says. "But when she gets up, one of us has to get out of bed because she's so heavy. She's already broken a couple of slats."

Iowa woman slams cop with kitten!

A WOMAN could get five years behind bars for attacking a cop — with a cat!

Lawmen in Burlington, Iowa, say an officer was checking out a property dispute when the woman suddenly flung her 3-month-old kitten, hitting his shoulder.

The cop and the kitten were unharmed.

The accused cat slinger was charged with assault on a peace officer.

THERE'S A TIGER IN MY BED!

A MAN-EATING TIGER wandered into the home of a family with three young children — and harmlessly lay down for a snooze, right beside them!

A farmer said he and his wife and three children went to bed as usual, in their hut in a West Bengal village. In the morning, they awoke to find the tiger in their home — "sleeping like a baby," the farmer said!

The frightened family tiptoed out and called for help. Wildlife experts tranquilized the big cat and put him back in the jungle.

"We didn't end up as dinner for the tiger," the farmer said. "We can

Hot dog bounces back from lightning strike

A BOLT of lightning flashed through a tree and zapped a dog who was chained to it, but the pooch didn't have to play dead — he was barely hurt!

The family of Sport the beagle says the hound was chained to a tree outside their home in Washington, Ind., when lightning struck. It struck the tree, traveled through the chain and hit Sport — hard enough that four black paw prints were left on the concrete where the pup had been standing!

But the lucky dog wasn't hurt, except for bleeding in one paw. The lightning also heated up his body.

Sport's vet was amazed that Sport so easily survived the lightning, which ripped all the

THE AMAZING KRESKIN:

'UFOs ARE COMING!'

By KATE McCLARE/Sterling World News

SCORES OF PEOPLE will witness the largest UFO appearance in recorded history, which will occur in a matter of weeks — perhaps only days!

That's the amazing prediction from The Amazing Kreskin, the world's greatest living mentalist and showman.

"I am absolutely convinced," Kreskin declared earlier this month. "That in May or June of this year the largest sighting to date will take place in the Nevada desert — probably the largest sighting in the past century.

"I am so convinced of the accuracy of my prediction," he added boldly, "that I am putting up $50,000 to back my claim!"

If no UFOs are reported, Kreskin promised, he will give $50,000 of his own money to charity. He said he has placed the cash in a sealed envelope and given it to the Fox News Network for safekeeping.

But Kreskin isn't worried about losing the money. He's made lots of daring announcements about the future — and lately, he's been right about them all.

The mindreading whiz correctly prophesied that former first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton would run for political office, that Bill Gates would resign from his Microsoft computer empire, and that George Bush would win the 2000 presidential election.

Now he says UFOs will appear in the skies over the Nevada desert, and "scores" of people will witness them.

He says the prophecy came to him the way most of his predictions do — not as a vision, but as an idea or thought that suddenly takes shape. He cannot say exactly when or where the sighting will occur, and he doesn't know what the UFOs will look like — or whether they'll land.

All he knows is that they'll make their presence felt.

Kreskin is sure that something's out there, watching us. "To say we are the only intelligence in the universe would be a horrible thought," he says. "God forbid we're the only intelligence. There's gotta be more intelligence than us."

And he adds, "I've been with too many commercial airline pilots who tell me they believe they've been tracked by some kind of entity in the sky."

But while Kreskin believes UFOs have been seen, he doesn't believe the reports of abductions he admires.

"I think they legitimately believe they've been abducted," he says, "but our memories are tricky things."

Kreskin knows plenty about the human mind, having made it his business since the age of 11. That's when he started his entertainment career, billed as "The World's Youngest Hypnotist."

He's not a psychic, he says, joking that "the only crystal ball I have is filled with water next to my plants."

But he's sure of the UFO sightings, which he says "will have significance in our culture and to the future of the free

CON-FUSED!

WANNA-BE JAILBIRD BREAKS INTO PRISONS

— & officials unsure how to punish him!

STANDING 5-foot-1, 150 pounds, with short, spiky brown hair and a broad smile, Perky Aspic resembles one of Australia's native species, the stout and stubborn wombat. And like the ground-dwelling critter, Perky loves to dig, which wouldn't be a problem — if he stayed away from the prisons.

"Years ago, I sentenced him to jail for a minor offense," said Sydney Municipal Judge Hyram Hickman. "I had no choice! He showed up to traffic court in bare feet encrusted with dirt. So I tossed him in the lock-up for gross contempt. How could I have known he'd like it there?"

When the 24-hour sentence ended, the Wombat begged guards to let him stay. Thinking that Aspic was mocking the judicial system, Hickman sentenced him to another three nights. But according to guard Ivan Verbolt, "Perky couldn't a'been happier if he was a hot pig in cold mud."

The stout little man made himself at home, befriending convicts of all stripes, from alcoholics sobering up in the cell, to hardcore violent criminals. "The men took to him like you would a stray puppy," said Verbolt. "What's more amazing is how the Wombat took to the bland jailhouse grub. It's like we was serving filet mignons."

On court orders, detectives investigated the Wombat, and discovered that he was a vagrant who lived in his truck. As an infant, Aspic was abandoned by unknown parents in the Outback, where aborigines adopted him and taught him how to survive in merciless terrain. There, his large thick hands made him a natural digger, and he eventually became a digger-for-hire.

"It was hard for him to make ends meet as a bare-handed digger," said social worker Evelyn Wong-Hidetree. "Then he comes to jail and finds a roof over his head and regular cooked meals. Most significantly, he's surrounded by men like himself — outcasts from society who readily welcome him. No wonder he likes it there."

The problem, according to authorities, is that the Wombat likes it a little too much. At the end of his three-day sentence, he wailed and grabbed onto cell bars. Guards were forced to use tranquilizers to sedate him and place him in his truck, parked outside jailhouse walls.

Within 24 hours, the Wombat was back.

"I was doing head count that night," said Verbolt. "And there was one head too many. And it was a dirty head at that."

A search turned up a hole in the basement leading to a tunnel that ran beneath the jailhouse walls and into a nearby grove of trees.

"What could I do?" said Judge Hickman. "I couldn't sentence him to more jail time — that's what he wanted, and it costs over twenty-thousand dollars a year to keep a man behind bars.

"I couldn't fine him, 'cause he didn't own anything but that decrepit truck. I couldn't even hospitalize him, 'cause those worthless shrinks said there was nothing insane about a man wanting food, shelter and companionship."

Authorities dropped Aspic outside of Sydney and increased jailhouse security. This appeared to work, as the Wombat wasn't seen in over a week.

Then he resurfaced — in a prison recreation yard a thousand miles away. Again, he was evicted, but he tunneled into another prison elsewhere in Australia. Then another. Then another. Authorities enhanced prison security throughout the country, but to no avail.

"Short of putting crocodile-infested moats around every prison, there's not much more we can do," says one prison official.

The Statue of Liberty weighs a whopping

By

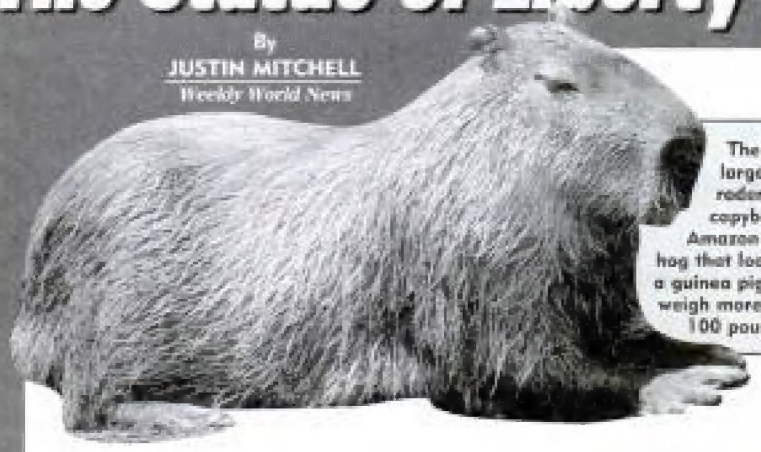
Weekly World News



The world's largest rodent is the capybara. An Amazon water hog that looks like a guinea pig, it can weigh more than 100 pounds.

THERE ARE 132 rooms in the White House. Sherlock Holmes never said 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' Donald Duck lives at 1313 Webfoot Walk, Duckburg, Calisota.

That's just a sample of the astonishing trivia that editors and reporters at Weekly World News have unearthed while researching all the terrific stories you read in our paper every week. Here's more:

● Among wacky inventions receiving U.S. patents are three-legged panty hose: "Panty Hose X 3" (U.S. Patent No. 5,713,081) and Human-Shaped Decorative Veggies (U.S. Patent No. 4,827,686) which allows ordinary vegetables to grow into all sorts of decorative shapes — including a human head.

● Penny a pound: Every male student at MIT that brought a girl to the Dec. 17, 1832 "dorm" dance had to pay an admission fee — one cent a pound — based on his date's weight. In addition, there was an added tax on the girl's hair color. Brunettes were an added dime, blondes fifteen cents, and a rare redhead was twenty cents.

● And now the rest of the story.... "Titanic Sunk — No Lives Lost" — headline in London's The Times, April 16, 1912.

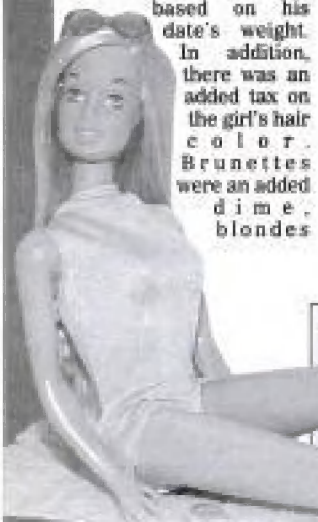
● And I'll throw in the Brooklyn Bridge if you act now... In 1925 a con man named Victor Lustig "sold" the Eiffel Tower — twice! He convinced two Parisian scrap metal dealers that the venerable landmark was going to be torn down and both bought the rights to what they thought was future scrap metal.

● The height of the 984-foot-tall Eiffel Tower varies, depending on the temperature, by as much as 6 inches.

● Steel wool scouring pads were originally developed by a pot and pan salesman who dipped steel wool in soap and scoured as part of his sales routine. The pads proved more popular than the pots and pans, and the S.O.S company was launched. S.O.S stands for "Save Our Saucepans" and the U.S. patent office would not approve the name unless a third period was omitted, due to the already patented international distress call: S.O.S. Incidentally, the distress call does not stand for "Save Our Ships" or "Save Our Souls." It has no meaning but was developed by Samuel Morse because of its simplicity: Three dots, three dashes, three dots.

Of the 250-plus known species of shark in the world, only about 18 are known to be dangerous to man.



Barbie dolls are considered anti-Islamic and importing them to Iran is prohibited. However, dozens of shops in Tehran in the late 1990s displayed original all-American Barbie dolls, some wearing only a swimsuit. A three-foot-tall Barbie bride model was selling for as much as $700 in a country where the average monthly salary was $100.

● Big stink: In 1087, while trying to shove the bloated, decaying corpse of William the Conqueror into his stone tomb, the attendants pushed too hard and the king's body burst like a balloon. The resulting stench and explosion of putrid body parts sent the sickened mourners running from the chapel.

● The disputes in the recent Winter Olympics were nothing compared to the 1904 Summer Olympics in St. Louis. The first winner of the marathon was disqualified when it was revealed that he had hitched a ride for more than 11 miles of the route in a car. And the official "winner" was literally dragged across the finish line by two men after he had ingested brandy, and strychnine sulfate mixed into raw egg white as part of a potion to keep his energy up earlier in the race.

● Contrary to popular belief, Thomas Edison did not invent the light bulb. A British inventor named Joseph Swan received a British patent for the same type of light bulb as Edison did in 1878 — a year before Edison received a U.S. patent. In addition, the U.S. Patent Office ruled on Oct. 8, 1883 that Edison's light bulb patents were invalid because they were based on the prior art of a man named William Sawyer.

● Imported Portuguese urine was used by upper class Roman women as a tooth cleaner. Incredibly, urine — though not Portuguese — was an active component in toothpastes and mouthwashes until the eighteenth century! Believe it or not, it actually worked. It seems that the ammonia molecules (still used in modern pastes) in the urine does a great job at whitening teeth.

● Outlaw Black Jack Ketchum was hung for train robbery on April 25, 1901 in Clayton, N.M. Execution witnesses were shocked when he ran eagerly up the steps. As the sheriff placed the noose around his neck, Black Jack shouted to the audience, "I'll be in hell before you start breakfast, boys!" He then ordered the sheriff, "Let her rip!" Because of misplaced weights, what happened next was a gruesome sight. Black Jack's body shot down and his head was ripped violently from his neck.

● A bird "chews" with its stomach. Since most birds do not have teeth, a bird routinely swallows small pebbles and gravel. These grits become vigorously agitated in the bird's stomach and serve to grind food as it passes through the digestive system.

● French law stipulates that to be called "Roquefort," a cheese must come only from that village in France, but the name is used, imitated, and abused widely.

● The phrase "a red-letter day" dates back to 1704, when holy days were marked in red letters in church calendars.

● Not until Herbert Hoover was U.S. president, in 1929, did the U.S. chief executive have a private telephone in his office. The telephone had been invented 53 years earlier.

● On Dec. 2, 1942, a nuclear chain reaction was achieved for the first time under the stands of the University of Chicago's football stadium. The first reactor measured 30 feet wide, 32 feet long, and 21.5 feet high. It weighed 1,400 tons and contained 52 tons of uranium. Although the same process led to the massive energy release of the atomic bomb, the first artificial nuclear reaction produced just enough energy to light a small flashlight.

● A "nullipara" is a woman who has never borne a child.

● Over the decades, Finland has banned many U.S. films, including Angels with Dirty Faces (1938), The Curse of Frankenstein (1957), Dirty Harry (1971), Enter the Dragon (1973), Friday the 13th (1980), The Manchurian Candidate (1962), The Thin Man (1934), Walking Tall (1973), and The Wild One (1954).

The latter, with Marlon Brando's renowned performance as a motorcycle gang leader terrorizing a small town, was outlawed in Finland for twelve years, until 1966.

● Musical felony: Jack Webb — Sgt. Joe Friday of Dragnet fame — once recorded an album called You're My Girl that included a spoken word version of Otis Redding's classic, Try a Little Tenderness.

● One ounce of gold can be stretched out 43 miles.

● Shock rocker Marilyn Manson's real name is Brian Warner.

● Elastic-faced comedian Jim Carrey's middle name is Eugene.

● There are over 375 organizations around the world devoted to fictional sleuth Sherlock Holmes. The largest group is the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club with more than 1,200 members.

● It has been estimated that the typical American will spend an average of 2 years of his/her life reading newspapers.

● Levan, Utah, is "navel" spelled backwards. It was so named because it is in the middle of Utah.

Hitting newsstands in December 1953, Playboy magazine carried no cover date because founder Hugh Hefner was not sure when or if he would be able to produce another. But the first issue sold more than 50,000 copies — enough to pay for the costs and finance another issue. Thus began the impressive life of
